When You Truly Encounter Christ, You Will Always Change Course...

Friends, I know that I've shared a homily in past years of the one-line homily that an elderly priest delivered when I was in college. Each year on today's feast, the gospel reading ends with the magi "departing for their country by another way." After reading this line at the end of the gospel, the priest said, "When you truly encounter Jesus Christ, you will always go home a different way than you came." Then he sat down.

It was definitely the shortest Sunday homily I have ever heard, but it was also one of the most powerful. Of course, in its literal sense, the text is referring to the magi's diversion from Herod. However, from a spiritual standpoint, we might see it as a reference to the transformative power of Jesus. When we allow Jesus to speak to us, we should never be the same. This is the process of constant conversion. If we ever sense ourselves blunted or lukewarm in our spiritual progress, we need to revisit the transforming power of listening to Jesus and striving to live according to his high demands.

I will be taking some time off this week in Florida. The main reason for my visit is for the priesthood ordination of one of my best friends from Xavier. He will be ordained a Jesuit priest in Miami, Florida on January 11th. Please pray for Julio Minsal-Ruiz. It will also give me the opportunity to stay with my twin brothers who attend college in Ft. Myers.

Let us seek Jesus like the magi. We know that he is already seeking us.
